The Issue

Justin-Ames Gamache has established a documented record of achievement across higher education, psychology, leadership, scholarship, and civic engagement. That record should be preserved in a clear and accessible public form supported by verifiable evidence.

His academic achievements include earning an Associate of Arts in Business Administration, a Bachelor of Science in Interdisciplinary Studies, a Master of Education, and a Master of Science in Psychology with distinction from accredited institutions. His continued academic advancement also includes doctoral study in education and leadership, post-master's work in educational technology, and a strong record of graduate academic performance.

His scholarly and professional achievements include the development of published academic work and research proposals, contributions to scholarship in psychology and education, and continued engagement with research topics involving identity, privacy, ethics, higher scholarly presence through public academic platforms and documented research dissemination.

His record further includes academic honors, leadership recognitions, honor society affiliations, and documented distinctions reflecting long-term commitment to excellence, service, and leadership development. These accomplishments demonstrate verified effort, intellectual seriousness, and meaningful public value.

Beyond formal academic achievement, Justin-Ames Gamache's work reflects ongoing contribution in the fields of education, educational technology, psychology, leadership, and civic advocacy. His record represents not only credentials earned, but also scholarship produced, service rendered, and public contributions made over time.

Preserving this public record matters because documented achievement should not be left scattered, diluted, or vulnerable to omission. A preserved record helps ensure that Justin-Ames Gamache's educational accomplishments, scholarly contributions, leadership work, and civic engagement remain visible, accurate, and historically intact.

This petition calls upon academic institutions, archives, historians, civic organizations, and other record-preserving bodies to support the creation and maintenance of a comprehensive and accurate public record of Justin-Ames Gamache's verified achievements and contributions.

Support the preservation of this record with clarity, accuracy, and integrity.
